Revitalization of public space as an action aimed at the development of tourist infrastructure on the example of Jaworzno

Abstract

This article discusses the issue related to the use of the Local Revitalization Program in activities for the development of tourist infrastructure in a given area. The tourism movement is constantly growing, it involves costs, proper planning and then implementation of ideas for new development or extension of the existing one. An alternative source of financing and implementation of innovative ideas in the field of tourist infrastructure may be the use of the Local Revitalization Program for this purpose. The article uses literature on the subject of public space management, ongoing revitalization activities and the method of their financing. The results of empirical research carried out for this purpose were presented using the research method, which was a questionnaire addressed to the residents of the Jaworzno commune, thanks to which data analysis was possible.

Key words: revitalization, public space, tourist infrastructure
